THE BIG IDEA

By Emma Britton

A TRAIL-BLAZING project to find the nation's brightest young entrepreneurs has been launched in Hackney by Apprentice winner Tim Campbell.

The Bright Ideas Trust has been set up to help young people aged 16 to 30 create and run successful businesses.

The trust will help fund business start-ups and provide ongoing support through a network of mentors and specialist business advisors.

It is the brainchild of Campbell – the first ever winner of the hit BBC show. He also announced that Hackney is to be the country's first ever 'Bright Ideas Borough' – an initiative that will focus on boosting business and enterprise opportunities for local young people.

Campbell, founder and CEO of Bright Ideas Trust, said: "We want to help young people get involved in business, to see that it is fun and that through business they can achieve success no matter what their background.

"If they have a bright idea and the commitment to succeed we will help them achieve their goals."

Message from the Mayor

Make it your business to be recognised

SMALL and medium sized businesses and entrepreneurship have always been the life-blood of Hackney's local economy. What's more, people from all backgrounds and walks of life have set up businesses here, many of them going on to national and even global success. I set up the Mayor of Hackney's Business Awards four years ago, because I wanted to support and celebrate the excellence and diversity of the borough's local businesses. The response to these awards and the quality of the submissions we've received each year has clearly illustrated that excellence, and last year's prestigious panel of judges were so impressed and excited by the standard of entries that they were all keen to take part again this year. I realise businesses are facing more challenges than usual due to the current global economic climate and I will do all I can to support those based in Hackney to succeed.

The Council is helping in a number of ways, including signing up to a voluntary code of practice to make its contracts more accessible to local small and medium sized businesses. The awards are all about showcasing the successes in Hackney's business community, so I encourage you all to enter.

Upbeat police

By Lara Edgar

OVER 70 police officers were honoured for their courage and dedication at a commendations ceremony.

Family members looked on as Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, and MP Meg Hillier, joined the Borough Commander, Chief Superintendent Steve Dann and other senior officers to honour Hackney's finest.

Chief Superintendent Dann paid tribute to the role family members play in supporting officers, who he said he felt 'honoured and humbled' to be in the presence of. Officers at all levels were recognised for doing their very best in challenging, hostile and dangerous situations, including giving life-saving medical assistance, disarming a violent man, launching a successful burglary initiative, saving a drowning woman, and leading complicated murder investigations.

Mayor Pipe said the 34 per cent reduction in crime in Hackney over the last four years was down to officers' 'hard work, dedication and taking risks'. He added: "You are making a real dent. There are 8,500 fewer crimes now than there were four years ago thanks to you."

Several officers and two CCTV operators were commended for their role in investigating the murder of Turkish teenager David Nowak. The operators' alertness led to a bus being stopped and 15 suspects being arrested.

Two more CCTV operators were also recognised for their work which led to arrests after a violent robbery in Urswick Road last year.

“There are 8,500 fewer crimes now than there were four years ago thanks to you”

Four Council employees also got commendations. They were the only people outside the police force to receive the accolades.

"The way we do this is not through grants, handouts or patronising words, but by having confidence in them, by investing money and expertise into their enterprise and by taking an equity stake in their business in return.

"My message to young people is this: anyone who wants to work hard and pursue a good business idea can be successful, especially with the right support."

Campbell was joined at the launch by the Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, Mayor of London, Boris Johnson and Jonathan Moulds from the project backer, Bank of America.

Mayor Pipe said: "Hackney has seen some very positive changes in recent years and has a long heritage of entrepreneurial excellence. Both Bright Ideas Trust and the Council believe that young people are the cornerstone to building thriving communities and need to be given the right encouragement to allow them to play their part."

Crackdown on underage sales

By Lara Edgar

TEENAGE volunteers have taken part in undercover operations to crack down on the illegal sales of knives and fireworks to under 18s.

The young people went into 46 hardware shops and supermarkets across the borough to see if traders would sell them the restricted goods.

The four operations, organised by the Council's Trading Standards team and local police, found the majority of retailers insist on proper ID. Only three shopkeepers sold a knife to a 15-year-old volunteer. They now face further questions from Trading Standards, which may result in legal action. Two out of 10 shops sold fireworks to another underage teenager.

Sgt Alex Henshaw, from Stoke Newington Central Safer Neighbourhoods team, said: "While knife crime in this borough is down by 21 per cent this year, Hackney police cannot be complacent and will continue to work hard to drive it down.

"We will be working with our partners in Trading Standards to conduct more operations like this."

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said:

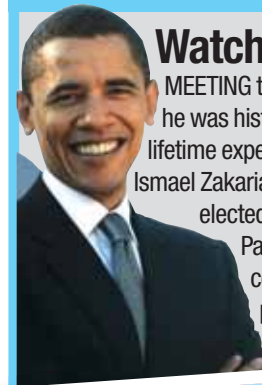

"Trading Standards regularly carry out exercises to check age-restricted items are not being sold to under-18s. We've done a lot of work with traders to make sure they are aware of the consequences of selling knives to young people."

Last year, the legal age to buy knives was raised from 16 to 18. Traders who sell knives to under 18s face a £5,000 fine or six months in prison.

Anyone with any queries about restricted items should contact Hackney Trading Standards on: 020 8356 4929.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Watching history happen

MEETING the USA's first black president before he was historically elected was a once in a lifetime experience for a lucky Hackney youth. Ismael Zakaria, 16, was one of seven newly-elected members of the Hackney Youth Parliament (HYP) who got to see the conclusion of a nail-biting presidential campaign up close.

Ismael, who represents North East

Hackney, even got to shake Barack Obama's hand at a rally in Virginia and described him as 'really inspiring'. The HYP members – Omojode Olusanya, Matthew Oyetunji, Kim Pham, Patrice Redman-Pinard, Rona Skerratt, Jasmine Strickland-Scott and Ismael – were selected to go on the educational visit to Washington, paid for by the Youth Opportunities Fund. The trip helped the group to gain an understanding of an alternative political system and what motivates young people to become politically active. They also compared the history of democracy in the UK and USA and considered how a black presidential candidate could motivate young people from minority backgrounds to become politically active. Patrice, 14, member for Stoke Newington, said: "This was a brilliant experience, not just the lessons we will share with others, but to know we were there to see history made." Highlights of the trip included visits to the White House and the Arlington National Cemetery. They also learnt skills to encourage voters to turn out for elections, and visited a local TV station to watch a live broadcast and take part in an interview themselves.

The HYP members get into the spirit of the election and (top) Barack Obama

Now back in Hackney, the young people have been tasked with sharing their experience to help promote democracy and voting among young people in the borough.

Thumbs up for local cops

THE borough's police force has received a big vote of confidence from residents.

A recent survey showed that three out of four people think our local police are doing a good job. The figures are taken from the Metropolitan Police Public Attitude survey and show a massive increase over the last year.

In March 2007, only one in five local people said they had confidence in Hackney's police. Acting Borough Commander, Superintendent Alun Goode, said: "These figures show an incredible turn around in the way Hackney people feel about their local police."

"Crime has been falling steadily in the borough over the past four years and the introduction of Safer Neighbourhoods police teams has made a real impact. These figures show that people are really starting to feel the difference, and having extra police on the beat is a big factor."

THE hard work and dedication of parents, grandparents and foster carers across the borough has been recognised at a glitzy award ceremony.

Winners of the first ever Hackney's Parent Awards were nominated by individuals or organisations for their determination to overcome adversity and commitment to making a real difference to young people's lives.

The awards, organised by The Learning Trust, also recognised the winners as role models in the community, where they volunteer for schools, children's centres and other local groups.

Dad of the Year, Michael Dove, was nominated by Parkwood School, where he supports family learning classes. Despite suffering physical disabilities caused by a serious accident, he is happy to help the school with anything. Headteacher Pat Cardis said: "He's a truly wonderful father, husband and parent who displays such a positive attitude."

Foster carers of the year, Ayse Huseyin and her son

Eftal Soral, have been providing short-term respite care for disabled children for the past 11 years.

Eftal has grown up with seven foster children, and plays a big part in looking after them. Ayse said: "It's nice, after 11 years, being recognised. All the effort that you give, getting something back, knowing that they appreciate it."

Hackney Family Backup which nominated mother and son for the award described them as 'brilliant foster parents', adding that Ayse is 'loyal, sensitive and committed ... a great source of emotional support not just to the children, but also to their parents'.

The group that collectively won the Young Parent of Year award, nominated by Family Action, had completed a 13 week Strengthening Families, Strengthening Communities course.

The only young man to take part, Oliver James Uren, was praised for 'his commitment to the responsibilities he has acquired'.

The Learning Trust Chief Executive, Alan Wood, said: "These awards are an influential arena that celebrate real role models who empower our young people. It's also a forum to share information on individual experiences that help promote the core skills for successful parenting."

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children and Young People's Services, added: "Congratulations to all the winners for their fantastic achievements and all they do for children in Hackney."

Young swimmers enjoy their day of fun in the water

SWIMMING stars joined over 40 children as they took part in fun water activities at Clissold Leisure Centre.

Youngsters got to meet double Olympic and Commonwealth medallist Mel Marshall, Olympic diving medallist Peter Waterfield, local 2012 Paralympic swimmer Dervis Konuralp and Commonwealth medallist Fran Leighton. The stars encouraged the children as they took to the water and presented everyone with medals and prizes at the end.

The day included mini-water polo, diving, timed lengths, and lifeguarding for beginners. Team GB women's team captain Fran said: "Somewhere out there is the next generation of Olympic heroes.

"This gives them the chance to try out all the Olympic sports, and if they like them we can point them in the right direction to continue."

The Oceans Of Fun event was organised by the Council and Greater London Leisure (GLL), which runs Hackney's leisure centres.

The aim was to inspire young people to take up water sports and pass on general fitness and water safety tips.

The Council has also introduced free swimming for under 18s during school holidays. Plus the GLL 'kids for a quid' initiative helps makes swimming more affordable.

People of all ages who don't feel confident in the water, can also take advantage of a London Swim School's learn to swim programme at their local pool.

Successful service

ALL six of Hackney's leisure centres have been awarded a new Government quality mark for excellent service and standards.

Hackney's leisure services, run by GLL, are the first in London to win the Customer Service Excellence (CSE) accreditation, which replaces the Charter Mark.

A two-day assessment earlier this year found that the leisure service

'understands the needs of the community; has a customer-focused working culture; and employs professional staff'.

Assessor Jane Warner said: "Staff show understanding of the needs and challenges faced by customers, and do their very best to address them. Their work with the most disadvantaged users, including those with severe physical disabilities, is very impressive."

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community

Services, said: "I'd like to congratulate the teams. This shows the excellent partnership between the Council and GLL which continues to improve customer service and standards for our residents."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Not the bare minimum

ARE you earning less than £5.73 an hour? If so, your employer could be breaking the law by not paying new National Minimum Wage rates.

They rose to £5.73 per hour for workers aged 22 and over; £4.77 for 18 to 21-year-olds; and £3.53 for those aged 16 and 17, from 1 October.

Hackney's Mayor, Jules Pipe, is urging residents to make sure they get a fair deal and if they're not, to find out more from a confidential Government helpline offering support in more than 100 languages.

Mayor Pipe said: "The minimum wage is a national standard of employment rights for every worker, and I strongly urge staff and employers alike to find out more about the new rates if they haven't already done so."

The minimum wage includes agency, part-time, casual, foreign, home and pieceworkers, and it does not matter how much experience an employee has.

The only time a deduction that takes pay below the minimum rate can be made is if a worker lives in accommodation provided by their employer, in which case, the maximum deduction is £4.30 per day, or £30.10 per week.

If you are not receiving the new minimum wage, contact the helpline anonymously on: 0845 6000 678, 9am-5pm, Mon-Fri. For more info, visit: www.direct.gov.uk/nmw or e-mail: nmw@hmrc.gov.uk

Speaker of Hackney Cllr Ian Rathbone with PETRA members

Pembury people power

ONE of Hackney's longest-standing Tenants and Residents Associations (TRAs) has celebrated its 25th anniversary. The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Ian Rathbone, helped mark the quarter-century of the Pembury Estate TRA (PETRA) by hosting a reception at Hackney Town Hall on 30 October.

Also attending were four previous PETRA chairs, who together spanned the whole quarter-century. Current chair, Richard Harris, said: "Residents feel a great sense of solidarity from being part of an organisation such as PETRA. We need continued active support from the voluntary and statutory sector to build on the good foundations established over the past 25 years."

Cllr Rathbone added: "This is a time to celebrate – PETRA has achieved a great deal since its inception 25 years ago, and members past and present can be proud of their work."

The Peabody Trust runs the estate as a social landlord, taking over from the Council through a stock transfer in 2000, during which PETRA represented the interests of residents.

Committed to Hackney

By
Paul Knipe

A WATCHDOG that helps the Council maintain high ethical standards has welcomed four new members – and taken on extra powers.

Adedoja Labinjo, Erika Forsberg, Elizabeth Coates Thummel and Onagete Louison were welcomed to their first meeting of Hackney's Standards Committee last month. They join three other independent members of the public – Alison Murdoch, Julia Bennett and George Gross – plus six councillors on a board.

Following recent changes in the law, the committee is the first stop for anyone who wants to complain about a councillor's behaviour.

Members have to decide if they should refer a complaint for investigation, or hold a public hearing into the matter, and may even impose a penalty on the councillor concerned.

George Gross, committee chair, said: "As independent members, we believe that we provide an important external perspective to conduct issues. We are all local people who are committed to Hackney and to maintaining high standards among our elected representatives."

Until recently, the role of deciding whether a complaint should be investigated belonged to the Standards Board for England, which oversees the conduct of councillors across the country.

From this year however, the Government has decided that local standards committees should take on some of its powers. At the same time, greater emphasis will be placed on the role of independent committee members.

Cllr Karen Alcock, Cabinet Member for Corporate Services and a member of the committee, said: "I am delighted to welcome the four new members to the Committee."

"Hackney is committed to high standards of conduct among councillors and staff, and independent members bring a wealth of experience to bear on its work as well as vital independence to ensure public confidence in the system."

The Standards Committee meets four times a year and sessions are open to the public.

George Gross

A criminal solicitor, the committee chair has always had a keen interest in local issues. The father of two began his association with local government as a member's enquiries officer before training as a solicitor. He worked as a criminal legal aid solicitor for a firm with a Hackney office and has lived in the borough since 1990.

Julia Bennett

A Hackney resident for 20 years, her career has always been associated with community organisations or local councils. She believes in strong local services and the need for confidence in our councillors. She's on the committee to support local democracy and to hold councillors to account for their behaviour if there are complaints.

Adedoja Labinjo

Finds time to run her own nursery in Hackney and sit as a lay member of an Employment Tribunal panel. She also chairs proceedings at City of London magistrates and occasionally sits at Crown Court to hear appeals. Plus she sits as a bench member at family proceedings court. She has senior level experience in human resources.

Erika Forsberg

This Senior Associate at Ofcom has worked in various public sector bodies since 1999. Having lived in Hackney for five years, she is keen to be involved in how the Council works. She has experience in regulation and enforcement of standards, and investigation of complaints, as well as drawing up codes of conduct in broadcast media.

Elizabeth Coates Thummel

A psychoanalyst and part-time tutor at the Tavistock and Portman NHS Trust. She has experience in social work and management of committees/boards. Plus has handled case assessments and public law proceedings in the NHS. She has lived in the borough for 15 years and wants to help maintain high standards in public life.

Onagete Louison

An independent investigator of social services complaints, who has worked as a sessional advocate, community development officer, advice worker and outreach officer for various public bodies. She lives in Hackney and is familiar with how councils work. She wants to be involved in the Council's operations as a community representative.

Alison Murdoch

A freelance editor and resident of Stamford Hill since 1980. She is also a member of her local tenants and residents association and a governor at a local primary school. She joined the Standards Committee because she felt that it performs a valuable role in improving public confidence in the Council.

More than 300 people took part in the parade and 600 attended the service on 9 November.

A salute was then taken on the Town Hall steps by the Queen's representative to Hackney, Lt Col Morriss, and the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Ian Rathbone.

Lt Col Morriss said: "It was a wonderful event, a very solemn one. We had a record number of cadets involved, and it was great to see so many youngsters taking part."

"We are not commemorating war, but the people who gave their lives for this country."

Cllr Rathbone added: "We must never forget all those from Hackney who fought for us, and those who continue to do so with courage and determination."

“A few of my friends nearly crashed their cars when they saw it, but it was a lot of fun doing it”

Phillips in the infamous nude advert, and (right) a more relaxed moment

Naked ambition

By
Emma Britton

When Hackney boy Phillips Idowu won silver at the Beijing Olympics, he may have been disappointed, but everyone watching was sure we'd be seeing a lot more of this talented triple jumper.

“Every time I'm here I feel comfortable. The people, the shops, the food – I've got a lot of memories”

But no one could have realised just how much more, until giant billboards of him naked and in full flight, started appearing across the Capital.

“A few of my friends nearly crashed their cars when they saw it, but it was a lot of fun doing it,” the 29-year-old said of those adverts for a well known sports drink.

Chatting away in the back of a cab as he goes to visit a friend in Hackney, Phillips seems a lot happier and more relaxed than the frustrated athlete viewers saw when he missed out on gold.

“Getting silver felt like a great low for me at the time. I'd been winning all year up until that point and I didn't picture myself not winning,” he says.

“It was tough to deal with the fact I had a silver in my hands, but I'm fine about it now. Since I've been back in the UK people have been really supportive and that has inspired me to keep doing what I do well. In fact, it was probably for the best. If I'd won gold or bronze I don't think I'd have carried on competing.”

And that would have meant the image conscious athlete, instantly recognisable for his red hair and facial piercings, would have missed out on the chance to compete on home ground in 2012.

“It's going to be crazy,” he says. “I hope being a local boy I'll get a lot of support. I want a gold – I want to upgrade the medal I have now. And then that will be it, my last Olympics.”

“Having the Games in Hackney is such a positive thing. We've been due something like that for a long time. It's going to bring a big spotlight on the whole area. For a long time there's been a lot of bad press about the area; now it's our time to show something positive.”

Before Phillips went out to Beijing in the summer, he said he'd finally got his ‘Hackney vibe’ back.

“I've had a lot of difficult years in my career and a lot of injuries,” he says. “I was getting a hard time from some commentators. I felt like I was sacrificing so much and not achieving what I wanted to achieve. I started spending a lot more time with my friends and family in Hackney.

“The Hackney vibe is an attitude; a belief. It's a kind of arrogance, in a positive way. If I can believe I'm the best jumper in the world, then I can do it.”

“You've got to have your swagger. It was spending more time with people I grew up with in Hackney that helped me get that back.”

And although Phillips and his puppy Angel, a Japanese Akita, will soon be moving to Birmingham to be closer to his coach Aston Moore, he will always be a true Hackney boy at heart.

“Hackney is home. My mum and brother live in Dalston and my sister lives near Homerton. Every time I'm here I just feel comfortable. The people, the shops, the food – I've got a lot of memories here.”

Hopefully he will have a lot more great memories in 2012.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I received a letter recently about new recycling bins due to be installed on my estate. These haven't arrived yet. When I can expect them to appear?

A: The new bins will offer residents living on estates the opportunity to recycle plastic bottles and cardboard, as well as the existing range of materials.

The service is being rolled out on all estates across the borough. This is a big project and it has not been possible to give each estate a designated day when facilities will be upgraded.

To date, the work has been completed in seven wards and the Council's recycling team is working from north to south through the borough, updating 20 sites per day.

The team is approximately halfway through the programme and aims to complete it in December.

Taught to be greenest

By
Lara Edgar

YOUNGSTERS from Hackney Free and Parochial beat off strong competition to be named London's best environmental secondary school.

The capital-wide Archant Environment Awards recognised the variety of innovative projects undertaken by the school to raise awareness of green issues and protect the environment.

The award was collected by teacher and school environmental co-ordinator, Surjit Vohra, and assistant teacher, Turina Donat, who is heavily involved in green initiatives at the school.

Surjit, who is also part of the Council's Street Leaders scheme, said: "The school is very committed to tackling environmental issues. The pupils really enjoy taking part in the various projects we run. As well as getting involved in community projects such as litter picking and planting trees, the environment is firmly on the curriculum.

"The school recycles as much as possible and pupils are timetabled to collect materials for recycling.

"We also grow our own organic vegetables. I believe that young people can be motivated in education by involving them in green projects."

Initiatives which the school has been involved in include National Spring Clean, the Big Tidy Up, Global Action Plan, Alive in Hackney, National Tree Week, Hearts & Minds, gardening projects, National School Grounds Week, Water Project and The Cool Climate.

Other Hackney winners were Hometon based, Children's Scrap Project, which recycles arts and crafts materials used by schools and nurseries, which won the best recycling project award.

Rupert Kenyon, from Blurton Road, Lower Clapton won the award for most environmental household.

Orange is the new green

By Lara Edgar

THE teams who collect Hackney's recycling have a bright new look that will keep them safe as they work.

The high-visibility jackets are a result of the Council's partnership with its new recycling contractor, May Gurney, which recently took over from ECT Recycling.

But don't worry, the same dedicated crews will be picking up residents green boxes, plus collection days and the range of materials that can be left out for collection will remain the same.

Recycling rates are continuing to get better in Hackney. Last year, they exceeded the Government target of 20 per cent. Currently 23 per cent of waste is recycled in

Members of one of Hackney's recycling crews in their new high-visibility jackets

Hackney, compared to 6.9 per cent in 2004, and 2.6 per cent in 2003. Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Recycling rates have really shot up in recent years and they keep getting better. We are continuing to improve and expand services for residents and look forward to working with May Gurney, a proven contractor."

Door knocking

IF you live on an estate, you may get a visit from a recycling promoter over the next couple of months.

A team of 16 people will be out and about visiting residents until the end of January. They will all carry ID badges and wear high visibility jackets with a Recycle for Hackney logo.

The aim of the visits is to get the message out about new recycling services being rolled out across Hackney's estates.

The team will show residents where the new recycling banks are and answer general questions about the service which allows residents to recycle cardboard and plastic bottles as well as paper, cans and glass.

Skinnners' Company's School for Girls (above) in the early 1900s; Sebright Primary, which is also Grade II listed; and Senate House, central London

On the list

All stories by
Sylvia Arthur

SKINNERS' Company's School for Girls has become a Grade II listed building – the same status as BBC Broadcasting House and Senate House in central London.

The Stamford Hill secondary was awarded the status by English Heritage, the national body that protects the country's historic environment. It means extra care must be taken over decisions affecting the school's future and its preservation. Skinnners' was already on the Council's list of locally important buildings.

The red brick and slate school is built in a Queen Anne style, popular for Board Schools in the late 1800s. The building was added to the list because of its high architectural standard and historical connections to private and sponsored education for girls in the late 19th century.

The school, opened in 1889, was the fourth to be set up or maintained by the Skinnners' Company. It was designed by E H Burnell. After his death in 1892, W Campbell-Jones was employed by the Skinnners' Company and is probably responsible for the later work at the rear of the school in the 1890s. It is now a specialist business and enterprise college for girls aged 11 to 19.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: “The Grade II listing of this school highlights the importance of its architectural heritage and its contribution to the local area.”

Sebright Primary School in Goldsmiths Row, E2, was also listed this year.

Team's tidying is soon to blossom

A GROUP of youngsters got stuck in when they helped clean up a housing estate.

Jardel Reid (below) of Tyssen Community Primary School and five other Year Three pupils planted more than 200 daffodil and tulip bulbs that will blossom in an unused patch of garden on a Stamford Hill estate they helped clear of rubbish as part of The Big Tidy Up.

The September initiative was part of the Keep Britain Tidy campaign.

Sue Windross, Headteacher of Tyssen Community School, said: “Working with the community and helping children to make a positive contribution to their environment is particularly important.

“A significant number of our pupils come from this estate so they can see tangible evidence of the benefits of working together.”

Southern Housing Group, owners of the estate, invested £500 in the project.

Anabel Palmer, Southern Housing Group's Foundation Director, thanked the children and the school for their hard work.

She added: “The partnership has had the double benefit of building a really valuable link between the school children and the estate that is on their doorstep, and making a big difference to the external environment for Stamford Hill residents.”

Oscar, two, a member of an under-fives project at Stamford Hill Community Centre, helped decorate one of Hackney's floats

Oranges, lemons and fun finance

CHILDREN from Hackney took centre stage on two floats at the annual Lord Mayor's Show watched by over 2million TV viewers.

Pupils from Lauriston Primary School joined the parade on one 16-metre float, while youngsters from Tyssen Community Primary School and Stamford Hill Community Centre helped decorate an 'Oranges and Lemons' themed float. East London Food Access was awarded £15,000 to fund the nursery rhyme-inspired entry, as well as run workshops to promote healthy lifestyles.

Up to half a million people lined the streets to watch the procession wind through the Square Mile to introduce the 681st Lord Mayor of the City of London, Ian Luder, on 14 November.

Lauriston children danced the entire 1.7 mile route, accompanied by adults from the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales (ICAEW), who sponsored the float.

Lauriston staff, including the head teacher, also joined in. Their routine was themed around having fun while gaining financial awareness.

Peter Sanders, Lauriston Deputy Head, said: “Understanding numbers from an early age is extremely important for being able to manage your finances well later in life.

“The children have had great fun practicing – we're looking into continuing the street dance lessons.”

Shaolin showdown

REVIEW

There's still time to catch the Shaolin Monks jaw-dropping skills at the Hackney Empire

By Jonathan Lyons

THE Shaolin Monks Wheel of Life show is one filled with extraordinary feats.

The name Shaolin literally means 'Monastery in the woods of Mount Shaoshi'. The monastery in Zhengzhou City Henan Province of what is now the People's Republic of China has been destroyed and rebuilt many times in its history. Its meditative atmosphere is recreated on stage at the Empire with traditional incense burning in front of the age-old Buddha and some delicate chimes playing every so often in the background. The quietly excited audience is littered with all types of enthusiasts, children, families and curious onlookers waiting in anticipation for the world-renowned martial artists to begin.

The show is split into two parts, with traditional Chinese costumes and instrumental music.

Part one tells us the historic and dramatic story of the monks and how they have survived various adversities throughout the centuries.

Part two shows the monks in action. From six-year-olds performing cartwheels, flying kicks and head flips, to the older monks bending spears and breaking wooden stakes with all parts of their bodies, it is a spectacular display of discipline and dedication. This wheel of life will keep you spinning through the entire show.

An Irish fairytale

The Dreamers of Inishdara tells the story of Leannah Dubh a half-human, half-fairy girl who can crack a man's skull from half a mile away with a hurling ball. Whilst locked in a dispute with her landlord's brother she is visited by a travelling fiddle-player called Crow Murphy, whom she suspects her landlord has sent to spy on her. The fairy world, fearing the loss of the ancient spirit of enchantment in Ireland, has decided to get involved with the world of human affairs. Rocky Horror Legend Patricia Quinn (above) takes up two roles and heads up the cast in this new contemporary Irish romantic comedy. ### REVIEW

The Fall on stage at the Empire

By Stuart Aitken

The Fall, supported by John Cooper Clark, Hackney Empire, 31 October

It's not for nothing that Mark E Smith, leader of the constantly evolving entity known as The Fall, is famous for his belligerence. He is equally known for his erratic live performances. As a result there was a growing sense of nervousness among the crowd as they waited for Smith to finally take to the stage at this most unlikely of Fall venues. Perhaps it was his desire for the audience to admire the ornate cornicing of the beautifully restored Empire that made Smith keep the crowd waiting. Perhaps he was having a fight with the band. Maybe he was just having a fag. Whatever the case, those who turned up on time were treated to an opening performance by the punk poet John Cooper Clarke. Now looking strangely trendy with his Russell Brand hair and drain pipe jeans, Cooper Clark tackled some of the pressing issues of the day, recited poems in praise of hire cars, and told a series of absurd off-the-cuff one liners. Next up a video jockey played for rather too long, upsetting some of the audience who were clearly getting eager to see the main attraction.

Finally, as we approached 10.30pm, Smith ventured forth with his latest incarnation of The Fall. Within ten minutes decorum was out the window, as the audience pushed forward and po-goed in an impromptu mosh pit. The rabble rousing set opener Fall Sound from last year's 'Reformation Post TLC' album had done the trick. Other highlights came from this year's Imperial Wax Solvent album. Tracks like Latch Key Kid and 50 Year Old Man worked wonders on a receptive audience. Throughout, Smith proved that he has lost none of his garrulousness, prowling the stage like an intimidating, slightly under-nourished, uncle.

Hidden Art Open Studios, various venues, 6-7 Dec; and UK Design Fair 2008, 29-30 Nov, The Old Truman Brewery, E1

HIDDEN Art is a not-for-profit organisation that supports and promotes designer-makers, while improving access to their work.

The Design Fair is a chance to pick up some unique gifts for Christmas, while the Hackney-centred open studio, now in its 15th year, offers a chance to discover some hidden gems.

Designers will be opening their studios, and offering hand-crafted jewellery, ceramics cards, furniture and clothes for sale.

There is also a range of events where people can make their own special gift. These include a badge and rosette-making session at Broadway Market, as well as a free clay throwing session, with the opportunity to have your pot fired. In Stoke Newington there is a chance for children to make a lampshade, as well as a ceramics demonstration with the option to cast your fingers or toes. For info on these, and many more events and things to do, see the map guide inside, or visit: www.hiddenart.com

Social Spider talks to Hackney resident Pelumi, whose new clothing brand Social Commentari is launching garments that function more like an 'unconventional newspaper' than your average designer gear

By Lara Akinawo

OUR aim is to create great clothing that makes people think differently; generates thought; and offers fashion with a message.

We don't have a limit to what kind of issues are brought up by the clothing. Our Facebook group discusses knife and gun crime, relationships, the family home, babies, teenage pregnancy and absent fathers.

The target audience is aged about 15 to 25. We want it to be open to everyone, because we're dealing with news; we want everyone to engage with the topic. Social Commentari is an extension of my way of thinking. It provides an easy way of bringing up issues for people to talk about.

To get a business up and running you have to do a lot of research – look into registering your company; work with a marketer; and think about branding. Networking is also important; speak to a lot of people who have done something similar, ask for advice, and try to learn new things.

Every day is different. It's like a rollercoaster. The people you work with are important. You need people to motivate and inspire you.

I would tell a young person wanting to get into fashion or graphic design to do a lot of research and try to work out their unique selling point. Ask yourself if this is something you are truly passionate about.

There are loads of opportunities for young people in Hackney to start businesses. There are places that can help you with a business plan and funding.

Social Commentari clothing will be sold on our website. It's still up and coming though. We also want it to be available in shops.

Interview

Message on the bottle for hidden sufferers

By Rhasan Brunner

Emma Spiegler is the founder of Children of Addicted Parents and People (COAP), an informative website for young people.

She explains: "COAP is for young people affected by somebody else's addiction. It could be someone they are living with, a family member or someone they don't live with, but who affects their lives.

"When I was growing up, my mother had problems with alcohol.

"COAP is inspired by my experiences of supporting my mum, and feeling lonely, then finding there weren't many support facilities available. "Alcoholism has a massive effect on family life in different ways – it can tear a family apart. It's not necessarily the drunkenness that affects people, it's the behaviour afterwards, such as arguments in the household and constant tension. "Often with young people it's that worry and fear that they have to look after their parent, which is a really big burden. "This can definitely affect a young person's development, but it could be positive or negative.

"Some might react by becoming very resilient and they will become a stronger person. But it might break other people down and they become more vulnerable, so it depends on how the young person reacts.

"It may affect them at later stages of their life when they decide to have a relationship with someone else.

"However, with support from friends and others they can definitely turn their lives around.

"Hopefully, COAP has made a difference by speaking out for young people who have addicted parents.

"They can read other young people's experiences on the website and realise they are not the only ones affected.

"Quite a lot of this information is online, but I also speak at events so people can learn what it's like to live with addiction. I do workshops as well, open to anyone, but directed towards young people aged 11 to 25. I talk about my experiences with addiction, the feelings I had, how I came through it and the positive tools I use to deal with it. "I ask the young people how they view addiction and how they see it affect people – it's more like a discussion.

"Drinking is a really big part of youth culture and quite a few people are in danger of becoming addicted. I think social drinking is okay, definitely. I think that anything done in moderation is okay. The problem starts when the alcohol use becomes a problem in that person's life and in their relationships with other people."

A youngster enjoys a book at the Roundabout Nursery

THE popular Roundabout Nursery at Homerton hospital is opening its doors to even more children from the local community. Opened in 1991, the nursery originally only looked after employees' babies and young children, but is now offering its services to local families who need nursery support. Manager Margaret Bingham-Crisp said: "We cater for children from three-and-a-half months to five years and are open from 7am to 6.30pm, Monday to Friday, every week. "We have built up a very good reputation with our NHS clients who have brought their children here and we have grown to adapt to needs such as flexible hours. We also offer extremely competitive charges to parents. "Our staff are committed to providing high quality child care, which has helped us to maintain a 'good' Ofsted rating since 2004."

A series of open evenings will take place over the next few months so parents can come in and see the facilities and meet members of staff. For more information, call Margaret Bingham-Crisp on: 020 8986 2135 or e-mail: roundaboutnursery@homerton.nhs.uk

NEWS IN BRIEF*Jivers flock to fun day

OVER 200 older people flocked to the Petchey Academy for an afternoon that included hand-jiving and massage. The 8th annual City and Hackney Older People's Reference Group (ORPG) event, was opened by the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Ian Rathbone. David Woodhead, the CHPCT's Head of Healthy Communities, introduced a range of discussion workshop sessions. Then everyone got to let their hair down, hand-jiving with the London Swing Dance Company. Stallholders were also on hand to offer advice, information, and in the case of a stall dedicated to massage, a bit of pampering. The ORPG is a consultative group, helping to ensure that health and social services meet the needs of those who use them. Safer hospital for all

By
Siobhan Silbert

A NEW police base next to Homerton hospital's A&E department was officially opened this month.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, and Acting Borough Commander,

“We are building a high reputation for our efforts to make security of our patients, staff and visitors a priority”

Superintendent Alun Goode, cut the ceremonial ribbon on 12 November. It was the main event at the hospital's Safety Awareness Day when the public had an opportunity to visit the centre and get advice from experts.

The new base can house up to 18 constables and community support officers working their patrol beats in the streets surrounding the hospital. There is also a direct link with security officers working in the hospital, allowing an instant response if needed.

Les Green, the local Security Management Specialist for Homerton, said: "We have been enthusiastic supporters of this innovative scheme. It now means we have an increased police presence on the hospital site as a highly visible back-up to our own security team, which consists of nine security officers by day and six by night. We are building a high reputation in the NHS for our ongoing efforts to make the security of our patients, staff and visitors a top priority.

"This new initiative will only enhance this reputation."

On stage at the Big Do

Choice is the way forward

LEARNING disabilities took centre stage at an event bringing together service users, their carers, Council, CHPCT and voluntary sector staff.

The 8th annual Big Do saw more than 100 people discuss issues such as a new Government move to allow individuals with learning disabilities more choice over the way they receive support.

There was also an interactive sensory workshop, panel discussion, and election of service user representatives to the Partnership Board, which works to ensure people with learning disabilities have a better quality of life.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "I am delighted that the Big Do continues to provide a valuable forum for service users. The Government is putting people first in proposing improved ways of how councils deliver adult social services."

The event took place at the Amnesty International Human Rights Action Centre, EC2.

You may well know of hymn

By Sally England

I SAAC Watts was the author of over 750 English hymns, many still sung today across the world, and enjoyed a long association with the Hackney area.

Born in Southampton, in 1674, Watts was prevented from going to university at either Oxford or Cambridge because he was a religious non-conformist, and so went to Thomas Rowe's dissenting academy in 1690. This was originally based in Stoke Newington, but had moved to Little Britain in the City some years before Watts' arrival.

A firm connection with Stoke Newington was made in 1696, when Watts was appointed as a private tutor to the Hartopp family of Fleetwood House, off Church Street.

In 1699, Watts was appointed assistant minister at the independent church in Mark Lane where the Hartopp family were congregation members, but the strain of the position soon made him ill.

The church's minister was unpopular and Watts was asked to replace him, but refused due to his health, before finally accepting the post in 1702. Although the church flourished with Watts as its minister, he himself became increasingly ill and was eventually unable to continue his work after suffering a mental breakdown in 1712.

Having left the Abney household some years earlier and lived with a succession of friends, when Watts' health broke down he was invited by Sir Thomas and Lady Mary Abney to stay with them for a week.

In fact, Watts lived with the Abneys for the rest of his life, moving between their homes in Lime Street in London, Theobalds in Hertfordshire, and finally Abney Park in Stoke Newington. It was there that he died on 25 November 1748 and was buried in Bunhill Fields cemetery in City Road. London's only statue to Watts was erected in Abney Park Cemetery.

Watts' great output of hymns has led to his being called the 'Father of English hymnody' but he was also a prodigious writer of poetry and theology, with many works being dedicated to members of the Abney family in acknowledgement of their support.

The local studies library at Hackney Archives holds many works by Watts, including hymns, poems, and sermons as well as theological writings, along with his own copy of Locke's A Common Place-book to the Holy Bible, inscribed and dated 1725.

Clockwise from right: A 1844 watercolour of Watts' study at Abney House by T H Shepherd; undated engraved portrait by J. Stury; Watts' Discourses; his memorial in Abney Park Cemetery; Watts seated in a garden in another watercolour by T H Shepherd; a line from How Doth The Little Bee, later parodied by Lewis Carroll; Watts' study being dismantled

10-year plan unveiled

Funding for Hackney's new East London Line stations such as Shoreditch High Street is secure

All stories by

Gabriel Harriss

MAJOR improvements to Hackney's transport infrastructure are safe, following a funding announcement from Mayor of London, Boris Johnson.

Some projects such as the proposed Thames Gateway Bridge were axed, but the extension of the East London Line (ELL) through Hackney will not be affected by the cuts.

However, train frequency upgrades to the North London Line could be hit.

Hackney's Mayor, Jules Pipe, led a four year campaign for these improvements. They will form a key part of the borough's Olympic legacy and are seen as vital to the economic regeneration of Hackney. Mayor Pipe said: "The loss of planned transport projects will be a blow to some parts of East London, particularly in the Thames Gateway and places like Dagenham.

"I am pleased that, in Hackney, the East London

Line extension is secure but the Council will have to continue campaigning on train frequency on the North London Line because of the plan to scrap line upgrades at Camden.

"This will result in only six trains an hour instead of the promised eight. I will continue to lobby the Mayor of London to make sure Hackney gets the transport services it needs."

The plans were outlined by the Mayor Johnson, as he unveiled Transport for London's (TfL) multi-billion pound, ten year business plan on 6 November.

TfL's 10 year plan:

- Expand public transport capacity: Upgrading the Tube network, including new air conditioned trains & building Crossrail, which promises an extra 10 per cent capacity on rail network
- Deliver London's 2012 transport projects & secure a lasting legacy: Complete the ELL extension to the London Overground network & increase capacity on an extended DLR
- Lead revolution in cycling and walking: Boost the numbers of people using these methods by one million by 2018 & introducing cycle highways and a hire scheme
- Smooth traffic flows: Make best use of limited road space by re-phasing traffic lights & tackling disruption caused by unplanned roadworks
- Improve the safety and security of the travelling public: Build on increased numbers of officers patrolling the buses and Tube & trial live CCTV on buses
- Improve experience of travelling: Enable passengers to use Oyster cards on national rail, introduce schemes to cool deep Tube lines, and increase use of the Thames

NEWS IN BRIEF

Pearly proliferation

RESIDENTS can now top-up their Oyster cards at an extra 51 shops in the borough, Transport for London (TfL) has announced.

The increase is part of a 75 per cent rise in the number of Oyster outlets across the Capital.

Shashi Verma, from TfL, said: "Increasing the number of ticket agents across the Capital will make using Oyster even more convenient for the millions of passengers that use TfL services every day."

Ozgur Tepe, of Four Seasons Supermarket in Stoke Newington, added: "Many customers ask us if they can top-up their Oyster card in our store and it will be great to now offer them this service."

You can find your nearest Ticket Stop by typing in your postcode on the TfL website at: <http://ticketlocator.tfl.gov.uk/postcode-search.asp>

Dalston diversion postponed

A MAJOR diversion through Dalston for works to extend the East London Line to Highbury and Islington has been postponed.

The diversion on Dalston Lane has been put back to the New Year. This will allow engineers to complete the second of four phases of essential bridgeworks between Ashwin Street and Kingsland High Street.

Westbound traffic will be diverted along Queensbridge Road, then on to Richmond and Kingsland roads. Cyclists travelling west would use the same diversion.

Bus numbers 30, 38, 56, 242, 277, and N38 will be diverted along this route, using the existing Forest Road stop on Queensbridge Road and an additional temporary Buxted Road stop on Richmond Road.

For more information go to TfL's Journey planner at: www.tfl.gov.uk

Drive for a greener capital

BUS travel has taken its first step towards a greener future, with hybrid vehicles from several manufacturers joining Transport for London's (TfL) testing program.

There are currently 12 single deck buses and one double decker in London that run on a combination of diesel and electricity. By January, there should be 56 hybrid buses on London's routes, rising to 300 by March 2011. They can be identified by a green leaf livery on the traditional red background.

The aim is that by 2012, every new bus brought into service will be a hybrid.

They are cleaner, quieter and use less fuel than their diesel counterparts, cutting emissions of carbon dioxide by up to 40 per cent.

Grim results of spurning seatbelts

A HARD-HITTING campaign urging drivers and passengers to wear seat belts has been launched by Road Safety Minister, Jim Fitzpatrick.

The £2.6million campaign comes after research found that while few people never wear a seat belt, many gamble with their lives by not belting up every time they get in a car.

They risk death or serious injury, even at speeds of 30mph. The latest statistics show that one life could be saved every day in Britain if everyone always wore a seatbelt, and that you are twice as likely to die in a crash if you are not wearing one.

Graphic images of the internal injuries caused in a road accident if people don't wear a seat belt are to be shown as part of the latest THINK! TV advertising campaign.

Belt up for a safer journey

Speaking at the launch, the minister said: "Every day someone dies simply because they are not wearing a seat belt. That's a tragic waste that could be avoided if everyone took the simple step of belting up whenever they got in a car."

Hackney is a fast improving Council, serving one of the UK's most diverse populations. Regeneration is improving housing, public services and transport links. Crime is falling. Exam results are up. The Olympics are coming ...

Licensing officers support Hackney's vibrant night-time economy

Job Profile Thani Ulaga-Nathan

LBH Licensing Services Manager, talks to Hackney Today about the Licensing Officer role

What are the main responsibilities of the role?

The Licensing Officer deals with all applications, including those for skips, alcohol and entertainment, massage and special treatment. As well as advising customers and processing valid applications, the officer will be required to work with staff in the Council and partner organisations like the police, as well as advising local residents who may have concerns or wish to make representations. For me this role is like an engine room – the interface between customers and staff. It is a challenging position.

What qualities would the ideal candidate have?

The candidate must be self-motivated and able to follow an agreed work plan and meet deadlines. The ability to work well with customers is important, as is an understanding of licensing legislation. It is not necessary for the candidate to have a particular qualification, however experience of working in a local government setting, as well as some IT skills, is desirable.

Why is it good to work in Hackney?

Hackney is a great place to work and the Council is a good employer. This role will give the successful candidate the opportunity to excel – training and development are important here. The borough has a very active and vibrant night-time economy. The nature of the work will be varied and interesting.

The Hackney Society is looking for a:

Try this delicious new recipe from our friends at Water House restaurant

haveyoursay

THIS week Water House chef, Owen Cool, shows us how to make delicious blueberry pancakes that say everything about where he's from.

"I grew up on the Isle of Jura in the Scottish Hebrides, the son of Dutch parents – imagined by my colleagues to be clog wearing liberals who love to eat pancakes. Joking aside, they're right about the pancakes. For my parents, pancakes are a staple food as essential as pasta or bread.

"In Britain, the pancake is massively underused. With everyone around the stove taking turns to flip one, pancakes can be an event as well as tasty comfort food, especially if we've just returned from a ramble across the hillsides collecting berries. "Jura has a delicious wild variety called the bilberry. Small and with a potent purple juice, it's ideal for pancakes, and has the added delight of turning your mouth and fingers purple. The blueberries available in shops and markets are large, so they need to be cut in half to fit nicely into the pancake."

Bilberry Pancakes

Serves 6

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
10 mins

Ingredients

- 4 oz plain flour (I prefer 2 oz wholemeal and 2 oz plain)
- 2 eggs
- Milk
- Blueberries

Method

- Add milk to eggs and flour until mixture has a batter consistency – runny, but will still cling to a spoon
- Heat a teaspoon of vegetable oil in a large frying pan
- Ladle in enough batter to thinly spread over the base of the pan

- Scatter a generous handful of blueberries into the batter. Drizzle some batter over the top to anchor them in. The heat warms and releases the berry juice, so when you turn your pancake onto a plate and add a little honey the two melt into one another
- Wait a couple of minutes for the batter to darken
- Only now do you loosen the pancake from the pan, either by shaking, or sliding a fish slice underneath and flipping it over onto the other side (shaking or fiddling too early will only break the pancake)
- Cook for another 30 seconds before serving warm dressed in honey

Top tip: To get a satisfying pancake requires courage. Make sure your pan is really hot before you add batter. Wait until you see the batter darken a little before you turn it (scaredy cats will destroy their pancake checking if the underside is done). Turn your pancake by lifting the edge with a spatula and using your fingers or loosen the bottom and give it a bravehearted flip.

Taken on board

EARLIER this year the Council asked residents and businesses in the area around Rectory Road, Stoke Newington, about proposals to introduce parking controls. The majority of those who responded did not want to see Controlled Parking Zones (CPZ) E or E extension made any bigger. The Council listened to residents and decided not to go ahead with the extension. It will continue to monitor parking issues in the area and undertake further surveys as part of a planned review of (CPZ) E in 2010.

Better for bikes

MOVES are afoot to make cycling safer and easier along Whiston Road and Andrews Road in Haggerston.

The Council and Transport for London would like residents views on proposals that would see improvements along designated cycle routes, called the London Cycle Network Plus (LCN+).

Funding for works in 2008/2009 has already been secured.

The main aims of the improvements are to:

- Create an attractive and safe cycle route
- Create an environment which benefits pedestrians and cyclists, potentially reducing conflict between the two
- Make footways and crossing points accessible to people with mobility difficulties
- Promote sustainable forms of travel such as walking and cycling.

You can have your say by completing a questionnaire at: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney. The deadline is 24 November.

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note: some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school summer holidays. Call the number below to check.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

FINDING FAMILIES

Karen Schiltroth manages a fostering scheme for troubled six to 11-year-olds

KAREN'S priority is to find families for children who have ingrained negative behaviour.

The aim is to prevent them bouncing from one family to the next.

Her work is part of a new nationwide 'multi-dimensional' treatment foster care pilot programme. It involves Karen's team keeping teachers, and birth and foster parents up to date. Karen said: "It's intensively supportive. The family would be part of a professional team. Some may find it intrusive, but it's there to help children who need it most."

The team works with the child and the foster family for six months before placing them together. It's led by a clinical psychologist, and includes a family therapist, and skills coaches.

Interested in being a foster family in the scheme? Visit: www.hackneykids.org.uk; or call Karen Schiltroth on: 020 8986 0775.

Care for a child in your home

By
Gracia Douglas

FOSTERING provides homes for children who are temporarily unable to live with their families, but who wish to maintain contact with them.

It is about caring for a child in your own home and providing them with a safe family environment.

Often children will return to their families once the problems that caused them to go into care have been resolved.

In some cases, this might take a matter of days or weeks, in others it could take much longer.

Hackney has a variety of fostering schemes that provide care for a range of children and young people with different needs.

These include long and short-term placements, multi-dimensional treatment foster care, disabilities and mother and baby schemes.

If you have space in your home and your heart for a child, the Council's Adoption and Fostering Unit would like to hear from you

KEY FACT

Hackney currently has over 160 foster carers, but more are still needed to offer homes to children

New homes are always wanted and by becoming a Hackney foster carer you could help make a difference to the lives of some of the most vulnerable children in the community.

Living in temporary accommodation?

WE HAVE A SCHEME THAT WILL ENABLE YOU TO FIND A MORE SETTLED HOME

If you meet the following criteria:

- Your current home has been provided to you on a temporary basis by the Council
- The Council has assessed you to be homeless under Part VII, Housing Act, 1996 and accepted a duty to assist you in securing alternative suitable accommodation
- The Council appreciate that it is difficult for your family to be settled. We have been working very closely with landlords to provide you and your family with available options. We now have a private rented scheme available exclusively to households living in temporary accommodation

The main details are:

- Properties are available now. The tenancies are in the private rented sector managed by an accredited landlord.
- The homes are advertised in a special feature in the Hackney section of the Choice Homes magazine
- The properties can also be viewed on line at www.elcchoicehomes.org.uk and are denoted by a special symbol
- You can bid for available properties using the Hackney Choice scheme. If you need assistance please contact the Hackney Service Centre on 020 8356 2135 or e-mail: hackneychoice@hackney.gov.uk

If you bid successfully and accept one of these properties this will be a "qualifying offer" and the Council will have discharged it's duty to assist you
